

Alumni House Garden Map

For each garden bed (labeled A1 to M2), the map lists the predominant flowers, grasses, and shrubs--using common garden names in alphabetical order. Since there is often more than one common name for a plant, the chosen identifications typically reveal either the gardener's personal preference or the name used by the source when the plant or seed was purchased.

With the exception of a few annuals (and plants treated as annuals--such as dahlias and peacock orchids), all listed plants are perennials and remain in the garden during the winter. Plurals identify instances where a visitor could see more than one variety in that flower bed. For example, the garden has a dozen different kinds of cranesbill, many located in the same flower bed.

The lists are not exhaustive, not all plants will be observable on any given day, this catalog does not identify specific varieties and cultivars, and some garden plants do not appear on this list because their identity has not yet been ascertained.
